Professional Indemnity

Professional Indemnity

Professional Indemnity should be considered and may even be compulsory for some businesses that offer a professional service. This includes traditional professionals such as architects, solicitors and accountants, but also new professionals such as technology service providers, environmental consultants, publishers and some manufacturers.

There is also an increasing need for companies providing design or informal technical advice to hold suitable indemnity cover against errors and omissions.

A Professional Indemnity policy will generally include protection against claims arising from:-

- Breach of professional duty or civil liability
- Legal costs in defending a claim
- Libel and slander
- Liability for loss of documents
- Liability for unintentional breach of copyright.

Professional Indemnity policies vary considerably in wording and it is essential that cover is arranged to protect fully against the risks run by the business.

Hamilton Leigh has over 20 years experience working with clients to ensure that the correct scope of cover is arranged, utilising a number of specialist Professional Indemnity Underwriters.
